MUSICAL KITES. - In Central Asia the amusement of flying kites is as popular as in Europe or America; but it is made to yield a double gratification. It delights the ear by an emission of soft, melodious murmurings, at the same time that it pleases the eye with its graceful, bird-like motions. Each kite is so constructed as to produce the effect of a floating Æolian harp, and thus the flight and the song of winged warblers are both imitated in the ingenious plaything.

Major Abbott gives a description of these musical kites in his "Narrative of a Journey from Herat to Khiva." "Each kite is a square formed upon two diagonals of light, whose extremities are connected by a tight string, forming the sides of the squares. Over the whole paper is pasted. A loose string upon the upright diagonal receives the string by which the kite is to be held and a tail is fastened to its lower extremity. The transverse diagonal or cross-stick is then bent back like a strong bow, and fastened by a thread of catgut. Of course every breeze that passes the kite vibrates this tight cord, and the vibrations are communicated to the highly sonorous frame of the kite. And as numbers of these kites are left floating in the air all night, the effect is that of aerial music, monotonous, but full of melancholy in-

REMARKABLE FREAK OF LIGHTNING. - We learn from the West Point Star that on Satur day week, during the storm, as Dr. G. Anderson, of King and Queen, was walking through his yard, he received a shock from lightning such as is not often experienced. A hole was burnt through the top of his hat and a considerable protuberance produced on the top of his head, but beyond this no damage was done. He was not even rendered senseless, and was caught before he fell.
